CAPITAL ROOTS 2017 ANNUAL REPORT | 1
A message from the
CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Dear Friends and Supporters,

In gratitude,

[Signature]
Each year, Capital Roots makes garden plots available throughout New York’s Capital Region with Community Gardens. Providing free seeds, plants, tilling, water and educational classes, the program provides nearly 4,000 residents the opportunity to grow their own organic food.

In 2017, Capital Roots celebrated the grand opening of the Dean Leith Jr., Memorial Community Garden in Lansingburgh that serves 11 additional families. Dean’s family, neighbors, gardeners and staff joined together in our first all raised bed garden to celebrate Dean with an official ribbon cutting, poetry and singing. Capital Roots also completed development of the Elm Avenue Park Community Garden in Bethlehem, set to open for its first season in 2018. In addition to new spaces, the organization purchased two lots in Cohoes for future development.

“For years now, refugees from violence in Burma have been successfully making new lives for themselves in the City of Rensselaer...Gardeners often work cooperatively in larger plots, sharing among friends and neighbors the Asian vegetables needed for favorite Burmese dishes. Comfort food, indeed!”

-Lynnette Noonan  MENTOR TO RIDGEFIELD COMMUNITY GARDENERS
Our Veggie Mobile® and Veggie Mobile® Sprout mobile markets travel into city neighborhoods in Albany, Rensselaer, Schenectady and southern Saratoga counties, year round, five days per week, selling produce at near wholesale cost to residents with limited access to healthy food.

In 2017, Capital Roots celebrated its 10th anniversary of the Veggie Mobile®. We recognized this milestone by attending 20 community events in the Capital Region and threw a party to celebrate with residents from our very first stop. The Veggie Mobile® Sprout added two new locations in Mechanicville, bringing our total mobile market stops to 37. Capital Roots saw a 63 percent increase in EBT/SNAP transactions and a 16 percent increase in Farmer’s Market Nutrition Program Check redemptions (FMNP) over 2016.

Also supported through the Veggie Mobile® Capital Roots’ VeggieRX program continued to partner with Whitney M. Young Health to prescribe coupons for fresh food to patients with nutrition related illnesses. New partnerships increased the programs cohort to fifty participants.

“My son loves a lot of fruits and vegetables so at times it’s cheaper than a grocery store. I can come here and pick up his fruit for the week. It works; we like it... Everyone is so nice and helpful. I’m able to get good food and not worry about making it to the store for it. It’s great.”

Anna Leak  VEGGIE MOBILE® CUSTOMER
Capital Roots’ Virtual Veggie Mobile® is an online marketplace where local farmers list their produce, dairy, meat and value-added products for individual retail and institutional customers. Daycare centers, schools, group homes, food pantries, hospitals, restaurants and convenience stores are able to easily purchase fresh, nutritious food that was grown locally.

The online marketplace procures products from farms located throughout 11 New York State counties - spanning north to Washington, south to Ulster, east to Rensselaer and west to Schoharie - bringing products into our regional Food Hub for redistribution to customers. Buyers shop when it is convenient for them and Capital Roots’ staff make deliveries 50 weeks a year.

2017 was a record-breaking year for the Virtual Veggie Mobile® with a 42 percent increase in Institutional buyers and a 37 percent increase in Individual customers registering for the program. Capital Roots worked in collaboration with the Food Pantries of the Capital District to provide five food pantries with gift certificates for fresh food through our online marketplace, totaling nearly $7,700. We also launched a new program in conjunction with Sheridan Preparatory Academy, delivering nearly 2,500 orders since November 2017 to individual customers.

“I love having access to fresh fruits and vegetables. All of the produce is of such great quality. It has really made a difference in how I shop and cook each week.”

-Patrice Loomis
SHERIDAN PREP 1ST GRADE TEACHER
The Produce Project is a year-round job readiness and life-skills training program for inner city youth. Troy High School students are given a stipend and school credit for cultivating our 2.5-acre urban farm and selling their crops at their Tuesday Farm Stand and the Delmar Farmers Market. As they learn about the nutritional benefits of fresh, local food, they also take home a portion of what they grow to share with their families.

In 2017, students worked with long-time community members, gardeners, chefs and volunteers throughout the Fall and Spring semesters with a heavy emphasis on job training skills. Students even sat down with Capital Roots past Board President Margaret Diggs to explore career fields through resume building, creating cover letters, and practicing group and peer-to-peer interviews.

Each semester SEFCU worked side-by-side with the students to strengthen financial literacy by exploring the importance of money management, checking accounts, savings accounts, and paychecks. Students also participated in fieldtrips to a native plant nursery and local farms as well as volunteered time at Unity House, Northeast Regional Food Bank and local soup kitchens.

NEED QUOTE
Our Healthy Stores program makes fresh produce available daily to inner-city residents throughout Albany, Rensselaer, Schenectady and southern Saratoga counties. Participating stores are provided custom refrigeration units that are stocked twice (or more) a week by Capital Roots staff, providing residents access to fresh produce where they shop every day.

In its 6th year in operation, 2017 was Healthy Stores best year to date, providing nearly 75,000 pounds of produce to customers in four counties of the Capital Region. With six new locations added to the program, Healthy Stores provided our small-business partners the opportunity to access more than 90 unique produce items to sell in their stores.

Capital Roots conducted special Health Retail Interventions for three different locations including Can-Stop Redemption in Troy, Steven’s Market in Rensselaer, and Ida Yarbrough in Albany. As a part of this intervention each store received upgraded equipment and store-specific marketing materials, allowing store-owners to provide more produce to their customers.

“I work across the street, so it’s very convenient for me to be able to pick up a few things instead of going all the way to the grocery store. It’s just my husband and I, so we don’t need to purchase a lot of food... Like I said before, it’s really nice to have fresh produce so close to where I work.”

- Joanne Corrado  HEALTHY STORES CUSTOMER
The Taste Good Series is a five-week nutrition education program introducing young students to new fruits and vegetables and learn about the benefits of fresh produce. Capital Roots’ Educator visits city pre-school through second grade classrooms and pre-school through fourth grade after-school programs throughout Albany, Rensselaer and Schenectady counties. Fresh food tastings, games, art, and other fun educational activities are incorporated into hands-on lessons designed to inspire children to adopt their own healthy lifestyles to bring home to their families.

In 2017, Capital Roots partnered with four different schools in Albany, Troy, and Cohoes to help increase the importance of healthy eating habits for elementary students. Students tried ____ and the fan favorite broccoli to name a few, sharing discussions on color, texture, smell and taste.

Capital Roots collaborated with St. Peter’s Health Partners to implement the Taste Good Series at Thomas O’Brien Academy of Science and Technology (TOAST) and provide each child’s family with information on our programs and coupons to use on our mobile markets. We provided the Taste Good Series to 150 kindergarten students at Giffen Elementary in Albany and Abram Lansing Elementary School in Cohoes. Capital Roots implanted a one day Taste Good activity for 30 pre-k students in a Headstart program at Unity Sunshine in Troy.

“My class was fortunate to have this great program for 5 weeks. [Capital Roots’ Educator] was great at presenting the lessons. The students were engaged the whole time. Even when they were not sure about trying the vegetables, she somehow convinced them to just try a little.”

- Maria Sokaris
SECOND GRADE TEACHER
CITY SCHOOL DISTRICT OF ALBANY
Squash Hunger is Capital Roots’ food donation initiative where volunteers collect and distribute fresh produce to food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters throughout Albany, Rensselaer, Schenectady and southern Saratoga counties. Collection bins are placed at various locations throughout the Capital Region allowing gardeners, farmers and grocery shoppers to donate fresh food.

2017 was a good year for Squash Hunger with 74,093 pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables collected and delivered to a wide range of emergency feeding programs across the Capital Region. Farmers, home and community gardeners, Capital Roots’ Food Hub and Produce Project, produce distributors, farmers markets, retailers and food co-ops all supported the program with donations.

Squash Hunger connected with new volunteer corporations such as Wildwood and ARC groups offering 92 new volunteers responsible for weekly deliveries and gleanings. Squash Hunger added a new bin site to Buhrmaster Farms that allowed us to deliver fresh produce donations to Fulton County (i.e. Gloversville School District Food Pantry, Holy Trinity Church Gloversville). Capital Roots incorporated new backpack programs including Homeless and Travelers Aid Society (HATAS) that provided fresh produce for healthy options. By connecting with new food pantries, such as Metropolitan Baptist Church in Albany, we ensured that we continue to make connections with those who need it most in our community.

“When our guests and tenants see people from the community come with donations like that, it lets them know that people care... It’s not just about a carrot or a food, it’s about a whole bigger picture.”

Capital Roots’ Healthy Streets program makes Capital Region roadways accessible to all residents regardless of their preferred method of travel. With increased opportunities for walking and biking in urban settings, Capital Region residents are offered a safe space to recreate, commute or move within their neighborhoods and the larger community.

In 2017, the Healthy Streets program was heavily involved with the advocacy of a Complete Streets Ordinance in the City of Cohoes and a Complete Streets Resolution in the City of Watervliet to create trail systems to further encourage healthy living and accessibility.

Healthy Streets additionally engaged the community with Complete Streets pop-up demonstrations on Hill Street in Troy with Parks and Trails New York (PTNY), Ramsen Street in Cohoes with city officials, Yates Village in Schenectady and TOAST Elementary and Ezra Prentice Homes in Albany. Healthy Streets also conducted two Uncle Sam Trail Clean-up events with volunteers and neighbors from the community.

“It’s about the progressive forward looking movement… for the city to provide our residents with the best, safest and healthiest ways to move round our city. It’s our job to find the trends, work with Dept. of Health, CTDC, Capital Roots and be able to provide those services to our residents and the entire community, proactively doing this to become something the community is looking for. This a proactive approach to provide a healthy safer community for our residents.”

-Jeremy Smith CITY OF WATERVLIET GENERAL MANAGER
Capital Roots’ newest program, Farm-to-School, connects local farm-fresh products with Capital Region schools. Local food in school cafeterias benefits students, teachers, parents, farmers and school districts by connecting community, improving student diets, and building the local economy. Farm-to-School also helps farms and schools navigate the regulations, developing systems and trainings that make local foods easier to prepare, while helping farmers adapt to changing food safety laws that can limit their access to schools and other great local customers.

Through Farm-to-School, the Urban Grow Center’s Food Hub acquired its USDA GHP certification to assist in making connections with producers complying with the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA). We performed produce handling and trainings at two school districts in Watervliet and Berlin.

In its first full year of operation, Farm-to-School developed relationships with two school districts in Watervliet and East Greenbush and sourced product from five different local farms. In Watervliet alone, 82 percent of the 1,249 students served were eligible for a free reduced lunch through the Farm-to-School Program. In East Greenbush, 23 percent of the 4,100 students served in the seven schools combined were eligible for a free or reduced lunch. Capital Roots attended two Produce Safety Alliance (PSA) Grower Trainings and became certified in implanting Good Agricultural Practices through eCornell to work with producers complying with the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA).

“The District has always felt that it is very important to stay connected with the local community, and a top priority to serve to our students fresh locally grown products. Coming from a farm family myself, it is an honor for me to contribute to the support of the area farmers and the Capital Roots Community.”
