We Grow
Healthy Communities

Capital District Community Gardens nourishes healthy communities.

From the opening of its first gardens in 1975, to the dynamic and multifaceted organization of today, Capital District Community Gardens has worked to reduce the impact of poor nutrition on public health in the Capital Region.

We organize community gardens, improve access to healthy food, offer nutrition and horticulture education for all ages and coordinate urban greening programs in Albany, Rensselaer, Schenectady and Saratoga Counties.

Capital District Community Gardens nourishes healthy communities by providing access to fresh food and green spaces for all.

Community Gardens makes garden plots available to anyone interested in growing their own produce. Gardeners receive nutritional, recreational, social and physical benefits from tending plots.

The Veggie Mobile is a traveling market that delivers fresh produce (often locally grown) to thousands of residents in urban neighborhoods without access to healthy food. Operating Monday through Saturday, The Veggie Mobile makes more than 20 stops per week.

The Healthy Convenience Store Initiative makes produce available in custom designed, refrigerated display units at urban convenience stores where families shop every day.

The Taste Good Series educates inner-city students, in pre-kindergarten through second grade, about nutrition. CDCG’s Educator uses music and games to make the lessons fun and to encourage students to help prepare and taste the produce.

Squash Hunger delivers excess produce from gardeners and farmers to food pantries, shelters and soup kitchens throughout the region. Each year we collect tons of produce at convenient drop off locations to benefit thousands of low-income residents.

Urban Greening uses public landscaping and street tree planting projects to add aesthetic appeal, increase property values, reduce energy consumption and improve the overall quality of life in participating communities.

The Produce Project employs at-risk students from Troy High School to operate a year-round urban farm and to sell their harvest at markets. In addition to learning life, job and entrepreneurial skills, each student earns school credit, a stipend and a share of the farm’s bounty to share with their families.
